AROMATHERAPY EXPLAINED

Aromatherapy has been practised for centuries in one form or another. The art is now widely established and used by people worldwide.

Natural essential oils are extracted from a variety of plants, flowers and woods, and fall into one of 5 fragrance families: citrus, floral, green, spicy or woody. They each possess different aromas and particular therapeutic properties.

Your reaction to the aroma of an essential oil has an important effect on the success of the therapy, so choose oils according to their general effects and uses making sure you are comfortable with the feelings and emotions that the oil suggests.
